

A Letter from Our CEO

During these unexpected and challenging times, I'd like to share an update and a message of hope to our tenants, partners, and industry peers. Though we are separated from our offices and each other, we have continued to work together, support one another, and look forward to many more exciting and successful times ahead. We are incredibly grateful to our investors, our staff, and our many partners around the country, all of whom face unique difficulties as a result of the current pandemic.

BRIDGE remains dedicated to working together throughout this difficult period. Our company is open and fully operating on a national level, and although we are working from home, our team remains available for any questions you may have. We are still developing and leasing our best-in-class projects, and continue to help our local communities as much as possible - as is our duty and pleasure.

While we are mindful as to how long this has been, we are unwavering in our commitment to developing state-of-the-art facilities that help store, ship and deliver a wide variety of essential goods and materials, which many need now more than ever. Our focus at this time is to complete our existing projects, in most cases, on schedule. We've continued to close on a number of major transactions and are actively looking for new opportunities in our core markets across the U.S. We remain confident that our business will emerge from this crisis stronger and more adaptable than ever before.

Steve Poulos
Founder, CEO, Partner
Bridge Development Partners